A. Upgrade to Self-Serve - Chris Tarman

What's happening with Colleague, Updates and other Ed Planning Software:

We have been looking at Ed Planning software since last summer, we created a group, had a series of operational demos with 4 different companies, rated them and the two that had the highest rating were Colleague Student Planning Module and the other was Hobson Starfish endorsed by CCC. Also, at that time we were hearing that web advisor was not working well. Another system is the Workday Student, but it was not a good fit.

We decided to invest in Colleague Student Registration and Ed Planning. We are also adding CRM recruit which is an outreach data model. This will also give us a return on investment from the data that it will supply. We are also adding a Mobile app, so students can do work just on a Mobil app. These are the programs we are moving forward with. We have begun updating the current system and have a plan. We have approached leads to help with decisions to customize and are creating a team to look at the configuration and to also get questions answered.

Will web advisor go away? Yes and no. There will be a time they we are still using that but soon we will have self-serve and the students will be using that. Web advisor will contain the links to the new systems until all of the applications are in place. We are excited to getting it running. May 15-17 is when consultants can come and help students to do this and after that faculty will be trained. The search criteria is better. Keywords searching will be in place. It should eventually have the capability to help with scheduling. You can find information if you go to the intranet for the district and go to the colleague folder. It will show all the products we are using. These links show the implementation timelines of each of these products.
