All are invited to attend a student Creative Writing, Poetry and Prose showcase that will be held in the Hyde Gallery, Tuesday, Nov. 17.

The two-hour event will feature students from Creative Writing, Poetry, Fiction Writing and Article Writing classes. In the first hour, three students chosen from each class will share original work for approximately five to six minutes each. There will be a total of about 15 writers from the writing classes.

After a brief intermission when refreshments will be served, the second half of the presentation will be for audience participation. Audience members interested in sharing any of their written compositions will be encouraged to read.

The free event was originated four semesters ago, and is held once a semester to allow students in writing classes an opportunity to showcase their work and get feedback from other writers. The Nov. 17 event will begin at 7:30 p.m.
