

Always conform, conform, conform "What will people think?" has become a common cliche, but I say fuck that, it's not important what even your very best friends think, much less "people". The most important thing in the world is what you think, you yourself, the individual mind, not governed by someone else's opinion. Don't be afraid of criticism. That's a great modern american weakness, the fear of criticism. Stand up to it, fight it, and if you're proved right then you have the assurance of your individuality, and if you're proved wrong, then make yourself right, and if it's impossible to say whether it's right or wrong, then be liberal, and respect someone else's opinion while holding your own. But if you know you're right and everyone but your critics you and I tell you you're wrong, don't make yourself a hypocrite to bring just to make it easy. Of all people to give in and be hypocritical with! Save your hypocrisy for ~~that~~ for the ignorant bigots who refuse to listen to reason. The firmest friendships (among the intelligent) are founded on complete honesty.

Turn stupid

We will never change the world, but to ~~make~~ one ~~person~~ conformist into a creative individual is an accomplishment worth spilling your guts on the ground for.