IT DOESN'T GET ANY BETTER THAN THIS

The Georgia Bulldogs, led by Head Coach Mark Richt, are one of the most successful powers in college football and a freshman from Grossmont College will now be part of it. Brandon Bogotay, from Patrick Henry High School, tried out for the Griffin squad last summer and with the help of Grossmont's staff and Lance Ortega, former kicker for the Griffs, became one of the best kickers in California. After "tripping" to 3 other DI schools, he visited Georgia and was overwhelmed with the facility and the coaches. He signed the scholarship papers this morning. Grossmont has a tradition of turning out outstanding kickers and punters which include Brad Daluiso, a UCLA grad who had a 10 year stay with the New York Giants as well as Jared Ballman who punted for University of Washington the last 3 seasons and Dan Zeidman, who kicked at Idaho State in '06-'07. Both are headed for several tryouts with NFL teams.
